

Abstract

The invention relates to a value document, in particular a bank note, having a value document substrate and at least one feature substance for authenticity recognition and at least two different feature substances for checking the value document, wherein, according to the invention, first and second feature substances are present on or in the value document substrate in the form of mutually independent codings which render at least partly the same contents, e.g. statement of value, currency, etc.

Fig. 2